

I object to being forced to pay for many channels that I never watch just because it appeals to certain other groups of subscribers. Some provision in the initial sign-up or subsequent billing should allow this flexibility since it is apparently technically feasible.